What to Bring

1.Appropriate Clothing-The weather in the Montana mountains is often unpredictable and can change quickly. It's important that you bring clothing that will keep you warm and dry; layers are recommended.

2.Sunscreen-As you climb in elevation sunscreen becomes even more important as you are exposed to greater levels of radiation, which can make it very easy to get burned.

3.Appropriate Footwear-you can ride in whatever you want, but we recommend well-fitting, durable footwear. This is especially important if you are wanting to explore one of the many mountain lakes which often have snow year-round.

4.Food and Water-bring enough food and water to not only enjoy your outing, but to make sure if you get stranded or lost you will be prepared.

5.Survival gear-first aid kits, fire starter, knife, signal, and good clothing will all help mitigate risk should the worst happen.
